RE

Create an illustrated book or cartoon trip explaining the story of Prahlad and Holika

There was once a demon king called Hiranyakashyap, who believed that he was more powerful than the gods. He wanted everyone to worship him.

His son, Prahlad, did not worship his father. Instead, he worshipped the god Vishnu. This made Hiranyakashyap so angry that he decided to murder his son. He tried all sorts of methods. Prahlad was attacked by soldiers, thrown over a cliff and into a well, trampled by an elephant, starved and bitten by poisonous snakes, but each time the god Vishnu saved him.

Finally, in desperation, Hiranyakashyap asked his demon sister, Holika, to kill Prahlad. Holika could not be hurt by fire, so she decided to use this magic power to murder the boy. She pulled him onto her lap and then sat in the middle of a bonfire, thinking that he would burn to death while she remained safe.

But the gods didn't like her evil intentions and took away her magic power! Prahlad sat in the fire and prayed to Vishnu, who saved him while the wicked Holika was burned away.

When the wicked Hiranyakashyap died shortly afterwards, Prahlad became king in his place and ruled wisely and fairly. And the moral of the story is that good always beats evil!
