Understanding the feelings of others

O.K. so you're just having a laugh. You don't think you are harming anyone or anything. So you're a bit noisy - aren't all young people?

BUT let's just think about how other people see you.

Imagine you were an older person looking at some of you messing about on the path in front of them.

What would you be seeing?

What would you be feeling?

What would you want to happen?

What would you want to say to the young people?

We all realise that young people like to meet together and do what they want to do. However, sometimes this frightens older people.

What do you think it is that frightens them?

Is the problem how old you are or what you are doing?

Why are they frightened by what you might be doing?
