How Did the Second World War Start?

Other European countries became worried about what was happening in Germany. Britain and France felt the best way to deal with the problem and avoid another war was to allow Hitler to carry on what he was doing. In 1938, the British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain visited Hitler. He came away from the meeting and made a speech saying he had done a deal which would cause 'peace for our time'.

Talk About It

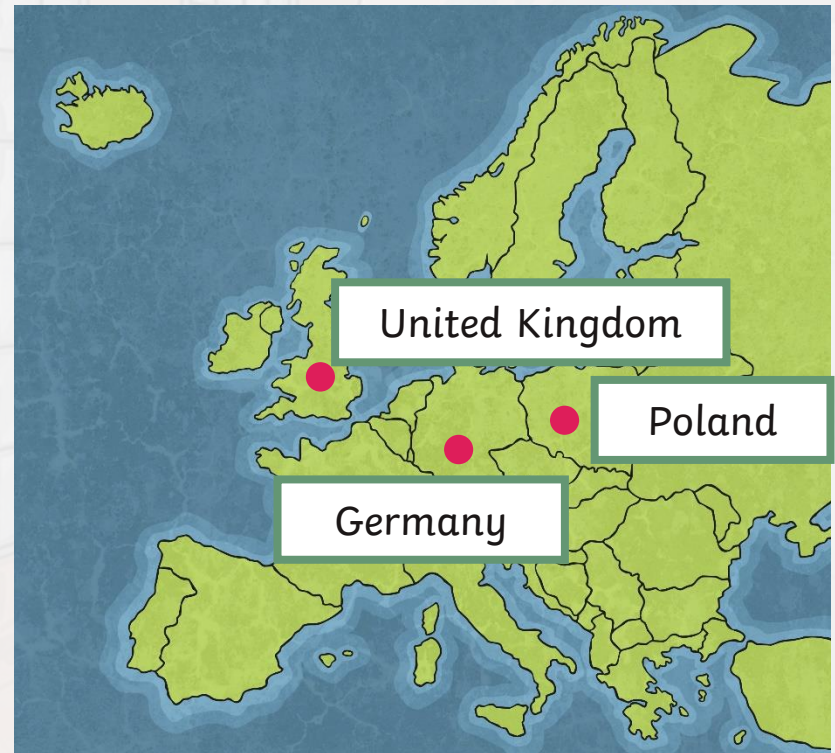

Do you think the countries were right to try to avoid war?
Or should they have started the war earlier in order to stop Hitler from doing more bad things?
