Message from the head:

I am often heartened by the actions of our children when considering the future of society and the planet. At times, the news can seem very bleak however coming in to Fleet and listening to the views of the children always gives me hope. This was never made clearer than this week—on Monday I saw our Rights Respecting Ambassadors selling reusable water bottles on the gate in the morning in an attempt to reduce some of the single use plastic we generate as a school—something they decided was important to them (they're selling more this coming Monday—please support them). Later in the week, I was visited by some of our Year 5 girls who asked me to sign a petition. They wanted to raise awareness on the issue animal poaching of endangered species such as Rhino's and Elephants. They very articulately told me how awful it was and explained the problem and the effects. When I asked what brought it to their attention they explained that they had been learning about it with Ms Kingham as part of their topic work. To see the children inspired by what they are learning and wanting to make a difference shows our curriculum is working. With their caring attitude and get up and go effort to make a difference, the sooner their generation is in charge the better for us all! Emaline has since created a change.org online petition—please read the article she has written below and visit the link to learn more and lend your support. Have a great weekend.
